

could be produced. He was never known to hesitate a second on a mount, and was one of the main and most popular riders with the Gilford & McCarty wild west outfit in 1914, one of the best wild west aggregation ever assembled, although not so large as many that have traveled extensively through east.

Webb was born in Greeley, Colo, and at the time of his death was twenty-four years, six months and three days old. When he was a small boy, he removed with his parents to Wheatland, and he grew up here. From early childhood, he was constantly with horses and was riding the bad ones while the ordinary youngster was employing a stick for a steed. His first real prominence came with his winning of the world championship at Cheyenne.

Henry Webb has a host of friends and acquaintances throughout the west who will be grieved to learn of his untimely demise, and there is a void in the family circle that will never be filled. He was thoughtful and considerate of his parents, sister and brother, and enjoyed the confidence and respect of his innumerable friends and acquaintances.

Besides the parents, Mr. and Mrs. J.B. Webb, the deceased is survived by a sister, Mrs. C.C. Cole, and a brother Whyde Webb, to whom the sincerest sympathy of the community goes out.
