Mrs. Joe Webb was brought to the hospital Sunday for treatment of a case of peritonitis, due to an abscess on the liver, which had ruptured. She had been under a doctor's care at her home for the previous ten days. An operation was performed immediately, but little hope is entertained for her recovery. The hospital regrets that in so many cases the seriousness of a patient's condition is not realized by the public until it's too late for remedy. Hospital attention in earlier stages of the ailments would greatly simplify the cure.
